The 177th was assigned to the 20th corps, General Rousseau, but its connection with it was only nominal. It went first to Tullahoma, Tenn , and was under the immediate command of General Milroy. It was there guarding the railroad and government property and stores until General Hood advanced in force, when it fell back to Murfreesboro. It was engaged in the actions at Columbia, Franklin and Nashville. After Hood's rout, the regiment was assigned to the 23d corps, and transferred to North Carolina, arriving at Fort Fisher shortly after its capture. The boys were in at the taking of Fort Anderson and Wilmington, and participated in the battle of Town Creek. It moved on to Kinston, coming up after that brisk engagement. The regiment marched to Raleigh and af-terward to Greeneboro, going into garrison at the latter place after the surrender of General Johnston.

WHENDERDAY EVERTISG, June 28, 1868. The last three or four steamers from Europe have brought a regular succession of advances in orting 5-30's in London at Signific. The effect in portuge-20's in Lencou at organization of the state of th undoubledly encourage increased investments in American scentities and consequently advance their price and call over additional appoller, so that their price and call over additional supplier, so that [we thing it not unreasonable to look for large chip ments come to begin. In this case, the bulls in gold who have been borrowing and hoarding for a rise will hardly persist in their efforts at "corner. rise will harry persist in their efforts at "corner-ing," and the return of the gold to the market will inevitably produce a constitutable decine. This, however, can only be looked for in the event of a further advance and increased activity in our bonds abroad, which is at present the chief ground of dependeate in regulating exchange.

The local mercy market is ruling more quiet, but are receivibg large deposits of currency from paymasters, but as this is not available for loans, it is not calculated in the supply, and the market is still reported close. Exchange continues close and firm at previous quotations. In our general markets to-day Flour declined 25c, with a very meagre demand. No. 2 red Wheat fell off fc, with only a moderate request. Corn rnled lower and dull. Oats were very quiet, but without quotable change. Providens are steady, but except for hams and dried beef there is no inquiry of consequence. Butter was more active to-day, and stendy at Ricfor Western Reserve. Bern are quiet at 230. Cheese is in fair request, but not active, at unchanged prices. In Highwines there was rather a firmer market at $100, and some dealers would hardly have been disposed to accept this figure for other than round tots. There was a better inquiry noted for Postoleum to-day from outside bayers, but dealers were not eager to sell, quote as herefoforo.
